LT. GOVERNOR WALTER DALTON TO PARTICIPATE IN ECONOMIC AND COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT DAY IN DURHAM

Dalton to Meet With Economic Development Leaders, Tour Economic Development Centers

Lt. Governor Walter Dalton will participate in an economic and community development day in Durham on Wednesday, December 8, to learn about Durham's economic success and how it can be replicated in other areas of the state. Throughout the day, Dalton will meet with a variety of economic development leaders and tour several economic development centers and small businesses.

Highlights of the day include a Minority Economic Development Roundtable at Durham Technical Community College organized by Andrea Harris, President of the North Carolina Institute of Minority Economic Development, and a "Meet and Greet" with a variety of Durham's economic development leaders at the locally-owned Joe's Diner. Dalton will conclude the day with a tour of Durham's most important economic development centers led by Casey Steinbacher and John White of the Greater Durham Chamber of Commerce. Tour stops include- Golden Belt, the Durham Performing Arts Center, and the American Tobacco Campus' American Underground.
